

Courage Poem by Andy Zhuang

There once was a valiant knight, He would always be the one to fight.
Travelling across different lands,
Stepping across heated sand.

Always courageous when it's time,
Standing up against all crime.
No one could beat him even if they tried,
When they saw him, they would hide.

He was called upon an important quest,
Carrying his gear and chainmail vest.
He conquered the quest with plenty of ease,
He demanded, "Can I have another one please?"

This valiant knight wore his kingdom's crest
Now everyone wants to be, like him, the very best.
